History of this Document

The first published dictionary of Dagbani¹ was prepared in 1941 by Blair and Tamakloe. The original source data for a 3000-word Dagbani Dictionary was compiled from 1948 through to the late 1950s by a Ghanaian government-appointed committee headed by Vo-Naa Andani, Chief of Voggo. The research for that draft was co-ordinated by the Bureau of Ghana Languages and the Assemblies of God New Testament Revision Committee. Because of continuing government-decreed revisions of orthographic practice during this period, neither a final nor a consistent text was ever prepared. The first Dagbani New Testament Committee had begun work in 1929-30, and the first rough translation was done on an incremental basis. From the late 1950s to the mid-1970s, the New Testament Revision was co-ordinated by Harold Lehmann, who had also worked on the dictionary committee. Rev. Lehmann sent John Miller Chernoff his own typescript of the draft dictionary at its most developed form (with Mr. D.A. Mahama written above the title on the front page), along with extensive notes and relevant correspondence.

Conversion History

1. Dagbani Dictionary draft from Harold Lehmann (NTRC-2.DIC)
2. entered onto electronic media and sent to GILLBT by John Chernoff
3. Converted to WINWORD6 tables by Tony Naden, March 1997
4. This version, Word for Windows 8.0, Roger Blench, December 25, 2004.

Tony Naden created a composite file incorporating the electronic Dagbani wordlist of Knut Olawski. NTN, AJN Naden comments either already in KO or added to Chernoff or amalgamation. Roger Blench has put all the existing file into systematic order (approximately!).

Major Problems (mid-1997):

Orthography: inconsistencies in sources particularly with short mid vowels: e/ɛ/ie are randomly used in both lists (often two or three spellings of the same word appear in KO), likewise o/ɔ, and to make things more difficult the two sources alphabetise the e/ɛ (resp. o/ɔ) in different orders, so duplication of entries and disorganised ordering will be found in those areas. Preliminary rules from the currently-sitting orthography committee suggest that their proposals, while linguistically unmotivated, will be largely such as will be possible to implement automatically Consistency : I'm afraid that working hurriedly and in small gobbets of time has left a lot of inconsistency in format. Particularly I have tended to move things into Col.4 notes or not according to whether Col.3 was overloaded in relation to Col.4. Items which need to be consistently located are :

Dialect (E.D./W.D.) information

Cross.-refs – Chernoff's "vide", KO/TN "see", "see", "see", "cf." etc.

Sources of loans: form of abbreviation, type of bracket if any

Entry structure: Chernoff puts all homographs of the same word-class as numbered sections of a single entry, along with idioms, combinations and examples. I have mostly transferred examples to Col.4 but left the rest. Olawsky/Naden attempts to separate homophones, numbering the entries (ka (1), ka(2) &c.) for cross-reference purposes. Polysemous senses within these entries are partially distinguished by semi-colons between glosses (comma-ed glosses being regarded as synonymous English correspondents). Idiomatic uses or characteristic combinations were entered in a separate \phr field in the original and are mostly in Col.4 in this version. Particularly with a view to reversal, I would consider it better to split up the Chernoff entries according to the numbered sections: this cannot be done automatically, as some separate numbers distinguish totally interchangeable English glosses, some homophonous senses, and some collocations which may be either idiomatic or combinatorial.

1. Introduction

The Dagomba are one of the most widespread and numerous peoples of Northern Ghana. They have two principal centres, Tamale and Yendi, centred in the Northern territories. Their language, Dagbani or Dagbanli, is widely known as a second language in north-eastern Ghana. Despite this, no dictionary of their language has ever been published. This draft is for circulation only.

2. Transcription

Dagbani is a member of the Oti-Volta language group, which in turn forms one major branch of the Gur family (Manessy 1975). Its closest relatives are likely to be the languages Talni and Nabti. Most of these languages show marked vowel harmony and thus have either seven or nine vowels in $\pm$ ATR pairs. Historically, in Ghana, the transcription of most languages has followed the pattern of Twi, with seven vowels, adding /ɛ/ and /ɔ/ to the five cardinal vowels. Despite this tradition, the phonology of Dagbani is exceptional. The open vowels /ɛ/ and /ɔ/ have merged with their closed counterparts and a central vowel /ə/ has developed. This was represented in some orthographies with /i/ but most recent publications eschew this. Academic publications on Dagbani are (Fisch 1913; Benzing 1969, 1971; Wilson 1963, 1970, 1972 & 1976; Wilson & Bendor-Samuel 1969).

Despite its importance, Dagbani has no standard writing system. The orthography used in the Bible is not the same as that recommended in academic publications such as Wilson (1972) nor that used by the current Dagbani literacy committee. Present writing systems do not accurately represent the sounds of the language. The intention is therefore to transcribe Dagbani in a phonemic orthography so that words can be pronounced correctly. Readers may then convert words to a writing system with which they feel comfortable (see Table 1).

Dagbani has two dialects, East and West, centred around Yendi and Tamale. In many cases, words are very similar or the same in both dialects. Where differences have been recorded, there are given with the abbreviations;

ED Eastern or Yendi Dialect
WD Western Dialect

The reference forms given here are based on the dialect of the Tamale area. The most common differences are vowel sounds, ways of forming the plural and the exchange of /r/ and /l/. Speakers seem to have little trouble adapting to these differences. The Nanumba people, speaking the Nani language, who live in scattered settlements in the south-east of the Dagomba area use very similar terms to those in Dagbani, often with small vowel changes.

Vowels

Dagbani has six vowels;

	Front	Central	Back
Close	i		u
Close-Mid	e	ɪ	o
Open		a

These can all occur in any position except /i/ which is confined to stems. Vowels may be long or short, except for /i/. A long vowel is marked by doubling. Ghanaian orthographies traditionally mark seven vowels, i.e. the five symbols used in English together with ɛ and ɔ. These are actually unnecessary for Dagbani, although now that the tradition has been established, writing them will probably continue.

Table 1 shows how to convert these characters to those used here;

Table 1. Vowel conversion table

Commonly written		This document
ɛ	→	e
ɔ	→	o

The i sound can be written as ‘i’ if the reader wishes to transcribe some of the words into one of the other Dagbani orthographies.

Consonants

The consonants are as follows;

	Bilabia l	Labio- dental	Alveolar	Alveopa latal	Palata l	Velar	Labial -velar
Plosive	p b		t d	c j		k g	kp gb
Fricative		f v	s z	ʃ ʒ		h (ɣ)
Nasal	m		n			ŋm
Lateral			l
Tap				r
Approximant	w				y

Most orthographies mark /ɣ/ the velar fricative as a separate consonant. This appears to be unnecessary as /ɣ/ is simply a positional allophone of /g/ between vowels. Nonetheless, it is marked in the present text as Dagbani speakers are familiar with it. The voiceless alveopalatal /tʃ/ is usually written ‘ch’ in Ghanaian languages following English orthographic practice and this is also retained. The palatal nasal /ɲ/ is written ‘ny’. /ʃ/ is written ‘sh’ by /ʒ/ uses the IPA symbol. Both alveopalatal fricatives are allophones of their alveolar counterparts but they will be written here following Dagbani orthographic practice.

The palatals /ʃ/ and /ʒ/ are in near-complementary distribution with their alveolar counterparts /s/ and /z/. In word initial and word-medial position, the palatals occur before front vowels, /i/ and /e/ and the alveolars before back and central vowels, /o/, /u/, /a/ and /ɪ/. The exception to this occurs with the –si suffix, which is quite common in the names of plants and animals and which does not appear to be shifting to the palatal form. However, it is in complementary distribution with initial and medial palatals. Since suffixes such as –fi never occur. There are, however, some words where –si- occurs in the penultimate syllable;

sapasini	captain of the Dagomba Army	<English ‘sergeant’ via Twi
suhuyiysili	hot-temperedness.

The likely explanation for this is that Dagbani has gone through a process of multiple affixing. The –si- in suhuyiysili was once a suffix and has had another suffix placed beyond it. The word sapasini, a loanword, was then analysed as conforming to this type of morphology.

Dagbani has no zi- suffix and thus almost all cases of /z/ + front vowel are realised as /ʒ/. Dagbani lists frequently include numerous words that begin zi- but it seems that in all cases the vowel is actually /i/, i.e. a central vowel. A few words have been cited with /ʒ/ + central vowel. It seems these may be loanwords that are insufficiently phonologised.

lòòzúlí lòòzúyá Gomphrena celosoides (Amaranthaceae) kaʒala ketinima a fife ?? (CHECK!) (T). ʒahi stagger KO ? ʒehi

dòzím dòzímá yellow flour from the dawadawa (locust) pod góóziê gózéhi acacia with red bark nanzido tree Amblygonocarpus andongensis (Oliv.) Exell & Torre nanzili nanziya tree used to make charcoal Prosopis africana (Guill. & Perr.) Taub.

Although /n/, /m/, /ɲ/ and /ŋ/ are separate phonemes in initial position, in syllable-final position their realisation is determined by the consonant following. Thus /N/ is velarised, i.e. [ŋ], before /k/, /g/ and /ŋm/ and the corresponding double articulations /kp/, /gb/ and /ŋm/. Before the labial consonants /b/, /p/ and /m/ it is realised as the bilabial /m/ and before the palatals /y/ and /j/ as /ɲ/. In the case of the palatals, the phoneme /ɲ/ is written ‘ny’ in the orthography but where a sequence /ɲɲ/ occurs the first nasal is written simply ‘n’. Thus the infinitive form of the verb ‘to be’ will be written n-nye/ε. In all other cases, /N/ in syllable-final position is realised as /n/. All these realisations could in theory be simply written ‘n’ but Dagbani orthographic tradition generally writes the surface realisation, except in the case of [ɲ]. This is not always consistent in writing, probably because different speakers have different perceptions of the degree to which particular compounds have been phonologised.

Non-Phonemic palatalisation and labialisation

Initial consonants may be palatalised or labialised under the influence of the following vowel. The broad rule is that in initial position, palatals are heard before front vowels and labials before back vowels. Thus;

Phonemic	Phonetic	Orthographi	Gloss
		c
bee	[bʲee]	bice	leg
bii	[bʲii]	bii	to be hot
boo	[bʷoo]	boo	What?
bu	[bʷu]	bu	to beat

Orthographically, therefore, this is only marked in the case of consonant + /e/. It should be emphasised that there is considerable variation between speakers and that the degree of the prosody is influenced by the vowels of successive syllables. Marking this is not strictly necessary, since speakers automatically insert the palatalisation. However, as with the other conventions, it is retained to make words easier to read.

In the case of some final syllables there are apparent exceptions. In a few words, the central vowels and even the front vowels are apparently labialised. The probable source of this are the disappearance of intervocalic consonants and then assimilation to C₁.

Thus: C + u + Ca → Cwa
 C + i + Ca → Cya

gùnààzúá	gùnààzúé	Hoslundia opposita Vahl
kpáráchíâ	kpáráchíhì	Snuff- box tree
púmpónchiâ	púmpónchíh	shrub and edible Strychnos fruit
	ì

Tones

Ghanaian convention does not mark tone in orthographies, regardless of its importance in individual languages. The Dagbani tone system is described by Wilson (1970, 1972) and there is no doubt that a secure command of the tones is required to become a competent speaker of Dagbani. However, individual words spoken in isolation can usually be understood by speakers even if the tones are incorrect. This should not deter researchers from learning the correct tonal pattern for each plant name.

There are two level tones and downstep, marked as follows;

High	´
Downstep	!
Low	`

Downstep is a type of high tone that lowers the pitch of the rest of the word.

Those who are not familiar with tones can simply ignore the tone marks and write the words without them.

DAGBANI DOES NOT HAVE A WRITING SYSTEM AGREED BY EVERYONE. IF SOME OF THE CONVENTIONS IN THIS GUIDE ARE DIFFERENT FROM THOSE YOU USE THEN SIMPLY CONVERT THEM. THE CORE OF THE GUIDE IS THE ACCURATE IDENTIFICATION OF PLANT NAMES.

Plurals and other forms

Like most Gur languages, Dagbani has an elaborate system of plurals for nouns that consist generally of alternating a CV suffix. However, in some cases these suffixes are irregular or have become reduced, and in some cases also the stem vowels undergo changes. Recording plurals is very important, as in many cases, the plural of a tree name is the name of its fruits or leaves.

Parts of Speech

Like all languages, Dagbani words can be classified according to the function they have in the sentence. These are known as 'parts of speech' -the most well-known types are nouns and verbs. The following table gives the abbreviations used in the dictionary with short explanations;

Abbreviation	Full form	Explanation
a.	Adjective	Describes a noun
adv.	Adverb	Qualifies a verb
aff.	Affix	A prefix or suffix
aux.	Auxiliary	Added to a verb to modify it, like a tense-marker
av.p.	Adverbial Phrase	Phrase used to qualify a verb
conj.	Conjunction	A word used to join two or more nouns, verbs or clauses
dem.	Demonstrative	Words used to point out something. 'this', 'that' etc.
excl.	Exclamation	Greetings or expressions that do not form part of an ordinary sentence
int.	Interrogative	Question words
n.	Noun	Refers to things, objects etc.
num.	Numeral	Number
part.	Particle	Short words added to complete the sentence
p.n.	Proper Name	A name of a person or object; always capitalised prep.	Preposition	A word positioning nouns or verbs in time or space
pron.	Pronoun	A word that stands for a noun
v.	Verb	Expresses action
v.a.	Verbal auxiliary	A particle placed next to a verb to change its tense or application
v.e.	Verbal extension	An affix added to a verb to extend its meaning
v.i.	Intransitive Verb	A verb with no object
v.t.	Transitive verb	A verb with an object

Needless to say, these categories were developed to describe English grammar and not all Dagbani words fit neatly into them. For example, it is sometimes difficult to distinguish verbs from adjectives. Only a clear grammatical description will help the reader understand the function of a word in a sentence. At that point, the assignment to a particular part of speech is somewhat arbitrary; what counts is consistency throughout.
